GREENSBORO, NORTH CAROLINA

GREENSBORO

“Pivot of the Piedmont”

In the Piedmont section of North Carolina, almost equidistant between the mountains and the sea, lies the progressive fast-growing City of Greensboro. In this immediate section has centered the most marked industrial growth of the new South, and the Greensboro area today enjoys one of the most perfectly balanced business structures in the United States. Farms are well managed and prosperous; industrial workers enjoy a fair wage, and living costs are low. Manufactures have the advantage of producing under favorable conditions, and cheap, rapid transportation carries their products to the leading markets of the nation.

The influx of new plants into this ideal manufacturing section is only matched by the growth of existing ones.

Educational facilities have been expanded and improved in this steady march of progress. In and around Greensboro are located eight institutions of higher education. Included in these are Agricultural and Technical College, Bennett College and Palmer Institute.

MEDICAL, DENTAL AND PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY, INC.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

We make progress, develop skill and gain maturity mostly by association, contact, demonstration—and by no less degree the fellowship and inspiration from our fellows.

Thus, we re-appear at our Annual Sessions through a realization of this fact. . . . Each year's attendance takes us one more step away from the insidious environment of mediocrity.

We approach our 53rd Anniversary at a time when American Medicine is about to enter upon a new course—a course that is designed to help us find our way amid the entanglement of a strange social order.

At such a time as this, how shall we heed the enchanting sound of the bugle-call of the Old North State Medical, Dental and Pharmaceutical Society, Inc., BY ONE HUNDRED PER CENT ATTENDANCE.

We meet you at Greensboro, N. C., June 11, 12, 13, 1940.

S. M. BECKFORD, M.D.,

President.
